What I said was contact Enza to help get him here so we can fix the problem. It won't be a "cure" but it will be a big improvement.

Seems pretty straight forward.

I guess our initial goal is easier stepping. I am not sure if he has the control to handle fast walking. So, somewhere in between?

Outpatient with nearly no down time. Some kind of training AFOs to follow would be a good idea to get the transition from stepping gradually eased in toward walking.

Dear Dr. Nuzzo,

I have one question: am I correct in understanding that there are currently no indications for SMPL, and we need to focus on slow walking?

1. We do not take any medications.

2. There was one episode out of three series on June 29, 2024, and one isolated episode on August 17, 2024. During the last episode, there was a 15-hour break in eating. At the onset of the episode, I gave him sweet water, and Lev came to his senses.

3. Hepatitis C and HIV are negative.

Three questions:

1. What medications does he take?
2. How many seizures does he have? (per day or week etc) (& kind).
3. Do we know his liver function & immune status?
